

Project D Part 3 Final

My idea was to create a spider web. The message is a quote from Einstein, "Look deep into nature, and then you will understand everything better." People refer to the expression, "Nature speaks". Nature does "speak" in its own way through sounds, visuals, and leaving impressions on those who experience the power and beauty of nature. However, nature does not traditionally "speak" through the use of typography. This piece is an example of what nature and a creature might say if nature and animals could use typography to communicate. Looking into and experiencing nature with respect, patience, and openness can lead to great understanding. To me this quote also fits the subtlety of the spider web structure. It's not a piece that jumps out at you, but a piece that requires a second look. This quote's message is about looking deep into nature. With this piece, the viewer must stop, look and read to really absorb the full message, which is purposely placed in a natural setting. There are so many things in nature that we take for granted. We need to look deeper at what we are doing or even what we are observing to understand everything better.
